Turtle Walkers coming to Haliburton

NATE SMELLE
County Life Staff

Roadsides attract turtles, but they are dangerous places.

For more than a decade The Land Between has been working to protect turtles in Ontario.

Throughout this time, as one of the organization's co-founders, Leora Berman has been actively involved in turtle conservation.

While conducting an annual roadside count of turtles killed on roads last year, she said they came across an average of more than one turtle killed for every kilometre of highway they surveyed.

This was 10 times more than the average number of turtles killed on the roads in years past, she said.

Backing up their evidence, Berman said was the fact that the Ontario Turtle Trauma Centre also observed a record number of injured turtles brought in for treatment in 2017.

She said a drastic increase in the mortality rate such as this could be devastating to the survival of turtle populations over the long term.

The numbers were so shocking, the Land Between and the Ontario Turtle Conservation Centre (home of the trauma centre) declared a state of emergency for Ontario's turtles.

In response to the crisis, Berman reached out to several organizations engaged in turtle conservation throughout the province, so they could work together to protect these species-at-risk from going extinct.

Joining forces along with The Land Between and the Ontario Turtle Conservation Centre are Ontario Nature, The Toronto Zoo, Scales Nature Park, EcoKare International, Trillium Lakelands District School Board and Curve Lake First Nation Cultural Centre. From this collaboration, the Turtle Guardian program was born.

On May 26, Berman said Turtle Guardians will be launching their inaugural Turtle Walks campaign.

"These walks are to raise funding, but also to raise awareness and to give kids and people hope," said Berman.

"They are community actions and bring people together for a common cause. This is our first year and we hope and anticipate that they will become annual events and events that eventually span all of Ontario."

Berman said the walks have been carefully planned to take place during the flowering moon – the most active time for turtle nesting in central Ontario.

Turtle Walkers register and raise pledges to support what Turtle Guardians have labelled their Tunnel and Trauma Campaign. Half the funds raised will go to support the turtle trauma centre, with the other half going toward the installation of turtle tunnels – fencing to direct turtles under roads.

Recognizing that The Land Between bioregion, from the Ottawa Valley to the Georgian Bay coast is home to more than one-third of all of Ontario's turtles, Berman said people in this area can make a huge difference when it comes to helping turtles.

"We live in turtle country, so if we're going to save these imperiled species, then this is the place to do it," she said.

"If there is hope to save these species it is here; and this hope is well placed in the hands of our kids – our next generations."

Berman said she had her first experience in turtle conservation at just 16 years old. While driving home from work late one night, she said she noticed the largest snapping turtle she had, and has, ever seen, crossing the road in front of her.

Pulling over to help it reach its destination, a police officer who happened to be passing by joined her in assisting the turtle across the highway. Driving the same stretch of highway two weeks later, Berman noticed that the municipality had put up its first turtle crossing sign where she had the close encounter. Ever since this experience she has felt a kinship with turtles.

"Turtles are the most innocent of creatures," Berman said.

"When you see them killed on the road, it's a very painful thing to see. They have a very important role in their ecosystem so when one disappears it affects everything else. For instance, snapping turtles are like vacuums in their habitat, eating dead fish and cleaning up the water."

One of the most fascinating things about turtles, Berman said is that they can live for more than 100 years. Some research, she said, even suggests they have the potential to live for more than 400 years. Although turtles' long lifespan is impressive, Berman pointed out that it takes between 30 and 80 years of laying eggs for a turtle to replace itself with one new turtle. This is another reason why it has such an impact on their population when a turtle is killed or removed from its habitat, she explained.

Snapping turtles are some of the more common reptiles to see crossing roads in the Highlands. The Land Between, a bioregion that stretches from the Ottawa Valley to Georgian Bay, is home to one-third of Ontario's turtles.

The Turtle Walks initiative aims to improve turtles' chances of survival by educating and engaging children, youth and people of all ages, with turtle awareness.

Turtle Walks are being held in Peterborough, Bancroft and Fenelon Falls on May 26; and in Bracebridge and Haliburton on June 2. They will take place on Saturday mornings from 10 a.m. until noon and are two kilometres long. To make a donation, register as a Turtle Walker, or for more information on how to get involved, visit www.turtlewalk.ca; or contact Leora Berman at 705-457-4838.

Indigenous culture celebrated in Wilberforce

SUE TIFFIN
County Life Staff

Wilberforce and Cardiff elementary school students gathered in a circle at the Lloyd Watson Centre on April 27 to celebrate Indigenous culture through lessons, performances and workshops.

"In circle, we're all equal," said Elaine Kicknosway, a Swampy Cree elder of Pelican Narrows (northern Saskatchewan). "We are all at balance to share with each other. All of you are teachers. You all can share with us. And you can also understand."

Elaine praised the school system for inviting her and son Theland, a Potawatomi Cree youth of Walpole Island First Nation (southwestern Ontario), to teach and share.

"We're learning from each other," she said. "It's important to open conversation, to have a safe space, to talk about our histories and our development together."

Theland, a young teen who is a youth leader, the drummer who led Justin Trudeau and cabinet into Rideau Hall in 2015 and who, for the past several years has raised awareness of missing and murdered Indigenous women through a 130-kilometre run, shared his style of hoop dancing with the crowd.

Elaine told the students he practises every day for 45 minutes and has been dancing for the past 10 years. Many students said later that they were amazed by the dance, in which Theland interacted with hoops that transformed him into animals.

An audible, "wow," was heard from the crowd when he danced using custom-made LED hoops in the dark.

"You never know where your voice, your song or your dance will take you," Elaine told the students. She said the oldest hoop dancer is 92 years old. "You never stop your dance," she said. "There's no time limit on your dance, on your song, or on your learning."

While the Kicknosways engaged students in a workshop on hoop dancing, representatives from the Metis Nation of Ontario led students in a traditional cooking lesson to make Three Sisters soup and bannock.

Algonquin elder Ada Tinney with son Scott taught a drumming workshop back at Wilberforce Elementary School (WES), and the Minden District Fur Harvesters offered interactive demonstrations of pelt preparation.

"It's part of the curriculum, but it goes so much beyond the curriculum in that it is an opportunity to share in a living, breathing way, not in a textbook way, with the children when we talk about Indigenous culture, what are we actually talking about," said Elaine Fournier, WES principal.

Fournier said the fourth annual celebration was funded by a Parents Reaching Out grant funded by the Ministry of Education and by TLDSB.

"When you work and live and teach in a community that on the surface looks like it is a homogeneous community," said Fournier. "When we talk about things like equity and inclusive education, how incredibly valuable it is that all educators in our community may not know, necessarily, if they have students that have Indigenous roots and they are then able to see themselves reflected in what's happening. That is so important."

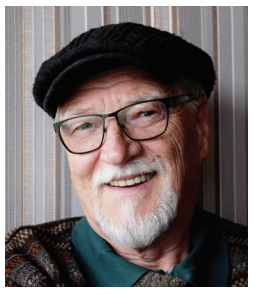
Beauty is not enough



GEORGE FARRELL
On Arts

MANY ARTISTS WHO use Facebook sometimes post images of their latest work on that social media site. A frequent friend response to those images is the word "beautiful." Now I know that Facebook is not the best place to go into reams of detail, but "beautiful" always seems to me a thoughtless way to compliment someone's art.

I suppose I've long had issues with "beautiful" and what it stands for. My mother was once a model and beauty was what she always strove for in life; whether it was looking beautiful with the skilful application of makeup, wearing beautiful clothes, or later on, cultivating a garden or weaving a scarf. I could say my mother has lived for beauty. It was, and is her way, and I love her for it.

But, starting in the '60s, and continuing to this day, I rebelled against the commercialized concept of beauty. Many of my generation saw the veneration of beauty as artificial, unnatural, and as a way for the beauty and fashion industries to keep women under an illusion that by using beauty products they could keep themselves eternally appealing to men. We felt then, and I still do feel, that women need to extricate themselves from the beauty/fashion myth in order to become truly empowered.

I've probably opened up a can of worms here, because many women swear that they beautify for themselves. It makes them feel good and so empowers them. But coming back to beauty as it relates to art, it seems to me that the majority of artists in our community, and those who buy the art, are still most swayed by the combination of qualities that make something pleasing and impressive to look at. So for many, beauty in art still holds sway over the visual interpretation of, for instance, a social injustice. On the world stage the artist Banksy has made millions as a political activist and graffiti artist who frequently interprets issues of social injustice.

But who wants to live with an interpretation of a social injustice, you might ask? A good question, and nowadays, at least in the Highlands, the answer would seem to be very few people indeed. Many people who live or visit here, do so because of the lakes, woods and wildlife. And they like to reflect those elements in the imagery they choose to have in their houses and cottages. There's nothing wrong with that. We too have some lovely landscapes and wildlife images adorning our walls.

But in addition we have some abstracts, as well as a print that depicts characters from a circus. We also have a small collection of African and Jamaican folk art, consisting of snakes, animals, busts, and a small oil painting that depicts activities in an African village. None of it would I describe as beautiful, but it is colourful, evocative, enlightening, educational, thought-provoking, tactile, and completely devoid of an overriding ethos that predetermines what is beautiful, and therefore acceptable and desirable.

Having said all this I have to admit that yours truly, in the 1970s and '80s, was in fact a fashion photographer, who dealt with feminine beauty on a daily basis. My job was to make models and would-be models look as beautiful as possible. But even then I did my best work with those young women who were not exactly what the glossy mags were looking for. I was much more comfortable dealing with women of character, or with perhaps a wonky smile, a prominent nose, a belligerent attitude, or with a body too-full, or too short for the runway.

To use a well-worn cliché, beauty is indeed in the eye of the beholder. But all I ask is that the next time you see a piece of art that is appealing to you, look deeper than the obvious, and ask yourself whether the piece has any other redeeming or meaningful qualities other than its physical attractiveness. You might then ask yourself the same question as it applies to humans. You might reach the conclusion that if characteristics such as humour, compassion, and regard for our fellow man are more important human traits than attractiveness, then mere beauty in art is really not enough.

Top 10 reasons to wear a ball cap

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

HERE IN HALIBURTON, ball caps are pretty well standard wear, except at your more formal dinner parties – which is why most ball cap aficionados avoid these events. To the newcomer or visitor to town this might seem like an odd fashion statement. But there are many good reasons that local men and women wear them.

Here's 10:

1. Tilley hats look out of place unless you are carrying a canoe and a fanny pack.
2. We learned that spray-on hair didn't work as well as advertised.
3. If you wear a toupee, you can't blame that lovesick squirrel for trying.
4. Too many pigeons.
5. To show all those kids how ball caps are supposed to be worn.
6. If a softball game breaks out, we're ready.
7. Because your favourite brand of truck needs advertising.
8. Because third degree bald spot sunburns are a thing.
9. Because one day, hat head will be fashionable again.
10. When you wear a ball cap it gives you something harmless to throw on the ground and kick.

Damp days of May /JENN WATT Staff

Mirror

River quivering beneath concrete Sky, cradling the pearl of Sun that glows like the Moon in the sliver of black River that slithers past the bridge, its current still as glass, ice cracking on its banks, muffling its flow.
I stand on the bridge, curling over the railing, peering down into the black mirror,
at the perfect white pearl of Sun.
Not a finger of wind smudging its glow, its gleam seeping into me, polishing the parts of me that Winter tarnished.
How deep does the River flow, I wonder, do the pebbles sleeping in silt, feel the glow of this morning Sun, piercing the River's skin?
Air throbbing all around me, swelling my Breath as if it's exhaling for the first time, my eyes mesmerized by the pearl of Sun that begins to wobble, ripples of breeze denting the River's flesh.
A fist of Wind, out of nowhere, tearing the warmth from the Air, smashing the perfect white pearl into smithereens.
I watch as shards of Sun are scattered across the surface of the black mirror, like a broken necklace, its glow shattered, the River's flow pockmarked by the rage of this passing Wind.
I grip the railing, Wind pummeling me, my eyes clinging to the pieces of broken Sun, jiggling in the River, waiting for Wind to hurl itself back into its lair, feeling the Air prickle all around me,
watching the River, as it flattens to glass again, marvelling at how the broken Sun puts itself back together again, shards and splinters of silver light dribbling back into a whole, not a crack, not a seam, appearing on the perfect white pearl of Sun, its roundness gleaming like the Moon in the mirror of the black River, as if the Wind had never come,
as if all it ever did was glow,
its light varnishing the ice melting on the banks, polishing the River's flow, illuminating its hidden soul.

Nominations open for Community Mental Health Awards

Each year, the Canadian Mental Health Association Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge presents awards honouring the contributions and achievements of people who work to improve the mental health of the community including volunteers, community leaders, individuals with lived experience of mental illness and their family members.

CMHA HKPR is calling for submissions for the following awards:

The Achievement Through Adversity Award honours a client of CMHA HKPR services, or a survivor of mental illness, who has shown continued courage and tenacity in reaching their goals. In education, employment, volunteering, or through the tasks of daily living, this individual is a role model for others on the journey to a healthy life.

The Distinguished Service Award acknowledges the significant contribution volunteers make to the agency, by recognizing deserving individuals for their exemplary effort.

The Maurice Lovnes Award is presented to an individual or individuals who have volunteered with CMHA HKPR, and who have exemplified the following traits during the year: vision, dedication, caring, support and commitment.

Caregiver Champion Award honours a family member or caregiver who has shown continued support to a person living with mental health concerns.

Naresh James Award recognizes an individual who has championed critical issues, pioneered initiatives, and has achieved a lasting impact in support of those who live with mental health issues, as well as assisting their families and friends. This individual has demonstrated commitment to support individuals who live with mental health challenges through their leadership, advocacy, and perseverance.

Champion of Mental Health – CMHA HKPR acknowledges individuals or organizations that have made outstanding contributions in the community by supporting mental health. These contributions should support knowledge, hope and belonging: the three pillars that form the foundation of the organization to enable Mental Health for All.

For nomination forms for the awards visit http://cmhahkpr.ca/awards.

Tam Grant Bursary – Access to educational programs is one way for individuals living with schizophrenia or other serious and persistent mental illnesses to realize their own potential. The Tam Grant Memorial Bursary seeks to encourage and support these individuals as they pursue higher education.

This bursary is offered in memory of Tam Grant. Tam was the son of the late Bill Grant, a local lawyer and municipal politician, and his wife Margaret. Tam played hockey and basketball in high school, and was active in Sea Scouts. Curling and photography were the other two passions that rounded out this bright, funny and very musical individual.

During Tam's first year of university, he had difficulty dealing with the stress of exams, causing him to withdraw from school. He took a year off and then went on to attend another university to see if the change would make a difference. Unfortunately, Tam's challenges continued, and over the next several years he was in and out of treatment. Tam was eventually diagnosed with schizophrenia but sadly, after years of struggling with his illness, Tam took his own life in 1977 at the age of 32.

The lack of community supports at the time frustrated and saddened Tam's parents. It is for this reason that the Tam Grant Bursary was created to assist young people living with schizophrenia or other serious and persistent mental illness to pursue post-secondary education.

Tam Grant Bursary Details:

Bursaries are awarded each year at the annual general meeting for registration for the upcoming school year. The maximum amount awarded annually is $1,000.

For this year's Tam Grant Memorial Bursary application visit http://cmhahkpr.ca/bursary.

All award nominations and bursary applications must be received by June 8. Successful nominees and applicants will be presented with their award or bursary at the CMHA HKPR annual general meeting, which will be held on Sept. 19 – location TBA.

Women's resources now offering family court support program

Women can now receive support with the Family Court process in the Haliburton and Minden area. The Family Court Support Program is offered to women that are victims of domestic violence.

Funded and supported through the office of the Attorney General, The Family Court Support Program provides clear information about the court process. These include understanding/accessing the many services available through the court system; Legal Aid and how to find a lawyer; help in documenting incidents of abuse for court proceedings; assistance in applying for emergency custody and access orders; and assistance in applying for restraining orders or peace bonds.

The program does not offer legal advice and is not intended to replace advice from a lawyer.

To access the program or for more information, contact Shelly at Women's Resources 705-878-4285, Ext 232 or the 24-hour crisis support line 705-878-3662 (1-800-565-5350 toll free).

Author brings The Spoon Asylum to life

SUE TIFFIN

County Life Staff

It's fitting that with the launch of The Spoon Asylum, author Caroline Misner is living her dream, because the idea for the story that became her most treasured book came to the Eagle Lake resident in a dream.

"It started with a dream," Misner told the paper. "I was dreaming about a young man who's walking by a river in a field. He meets this portly black gentleman with a trumpet and they start talking and it starts to rain. They go to find shelter in a little cave, and they're talking and playing the trumpet in the cave, and then I woke up. That's how it started, it started as a dream. I woke up and thought, I can make a story around that, that's really interesting. And then the story just started snowballing and growing and growing."

> When I finished writing this, I couldn't let the characters go. I wrote a sequel.
> — Caroline Misner

The Spoon Asylum tells the story of Haven Cattrell, Wetherby Moss and Wetherby's son Jude, who live in the small northern Ontario town of Davisville in the 1930s.

"It is the story of the racism that haunted black jazz musicians in the '30s, and how that racism found its way to Davisville," reads the newly printed back cover. "It is the story of how love can blind young men and save them from themselves, and it is the story of how important it is to dream when the chaos and hard times around you want to drag you down."

Misner wrote the book 12 years ago, after her three young kids grew older and more independent.

"The first 15 years after being married I didn't do a lot of writing – I didn't have time," she said. "I was always pregnant or raising a child or both. It wasn't until they got older that I picked up a pen again.

"When they were little I was always writing cute little poems or stories for them to entertain them. But it wasn't really something I wanted to seriously pursue until my kids were older. Now that they're all grown, I'm going full guns blazing."

And she has. Misner is very much an active writer. She is halfway through the third book in a young adult fantasy trilogy and the characters from The Spoon Asylum were so meaningful to her, that she has written a sequel to continue their story.

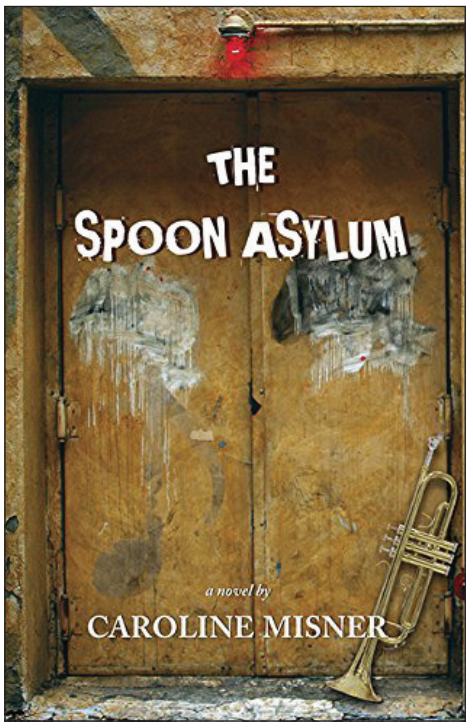
"When I finished writing this, I couldn't let the characters go. I wrote a sequel," she said. "[I'm] hoping once the dust settles I can present the sequel to my publisher. The way it ends, it ends at the end of the story, but they're still only 18. There's still a life ahead of them. I wanted to write about it and see what happened to them."

Her pride and passion for The Spoon Asylum is evident, and not just because she has said it's her proudest achievement, or the one novel (she has written several) she believes in the most.

"I really love the characters and the story," she said. "I think it was Toni Morrison who said, 'I started writing because all the books didn't appeal to me so I wrote the book I wanted to read.' So that's, kind of like me. I wrote a book I would want to read."

The theme of the story looks at racism and prejudice in the '30s, owing to what Misner said is her strong sense of social consciousness and an anger for injustice.

"It's about a part of history that a lot of people would want to close their eyes to," she said. "What happened to my characters is tragic. It wasn't just them, it happened to a lot of people. It's a shame and an injustice and we should know about it, and that era of history."



Because the novel features much jazz music, Misner had her father, a professional jazz musician, read it in the early part of the process.

"I grew up listening to jazz," she said. "It's all about the music, too, how it influenced people. He didn't like it. Don't ask me to sing or play the piano or anything, I'm so terrible with music, and of course he's a professional, so he kept pointing out everything. 'You don't hold a trumpet like that', you know, things like that." Her dad's guidance, as well as help from her editor, who is also a jazz musician, ensured the story is accurate.

Misner follows in grandfather's footsteps

"Unless you're writing a total fantasy that's in it's own little world, [then] you can do whatever you want," said Misner. "But when you're writing a story in the real world, you have to be accurate."

Misner said her dad has been so supportive of her work in part because her grandfather was a writer, too. Josef Kurz was a Czech poet and writer whose work was banned by the Communist Regime at that time. "My father tells me he was very gifted," said Misner. "He could scribble down a poem in five minutes, and it would rhyme perfectly, perfect metre. I guess, yeah, it's in my blood."

She said she doesn't write as quickly as her grandfather might have, but still, she wrote The Spoon Asylum in just six months. It took longer than that to get it published, but Misner did not give up.

"I wrote it about 10 or 12 years ago," she said. "I've been trying like hell to get it published. I must have sent it to 50 different publishers. You hear things, like Catcher in the Rye was rejected by 200 publishers before it finally got out there. It's all part of the business. I try not to let myself get discouraged when I get a rejection."

It was at home in Eagle Lake, where Misner has been a cottager since 1997 and a full-time resident since last year, that she received an email from her publisher, Thistledown Press, that the book had been accepted. "I was like, am I really reading this?" said Misner. "Is this real? It was almost surreal. I couldn't believe it." After years of dedication to The Spoon Asylum, Misner's dream of having it published has come true.

"I'm very stubborn," she said. "I never give up. But Wayne Gretzky says you always miss 100 per cent of the shots you don't take."

To learn more about Caroline's work, visit www.carolinemisner.com. Meet her at the book launch event for The Spoon Asylum at the Rails End Gallery on Saturday, May 12 from 11 a.m. to noon. Admission by donation.

Cottagers prepare for municipal elections

If you want something done right, do it yourself.

Many cottagers will be heeding this advice when the municipal elections roll around in November. They want their voices heard — their issues addressed — in local decision-making and some will be throwing their names into the hat November in a bid to win a seat at the council tables.

What's more is they'll be prepared to mount effective campaigns, armed with solid advice from seasoned politicians and pundits.

More than 200 cottage owners attended a day-long conference in Scarborough on April 23, where election readiness was the primary focus. The occasion was the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations (FOCA) spring seminar.

For decades, cottagers have stood on the sidelines of the political arena, often grumbling that their interests are being overlooked. Only recently have they begun to make significant inroads and the result has been a learning experience for cottagers and permanent residents alike.

In Haliburton County, most municipalities have representation from cottagers or former cottagers. These councillors, deputy reeves and reeves have discovered there are seldom simple solutions to problems. Meanwhile, permanent residents have come to realize these council members are not necessarily their opponents.

By getting involved in the political process, cottagers have broken free of the "troublemaker" label. Instead of criticizing from the sidelines, cottagers are getting personally involved in the solutions.

The keynote speaker at the FOCA seminar was John Birnbaum, the executive director of the Georgian Bay Association. He cautioned potential councillors that their views may not always prevail, "but at least we'll have been part of the action — not seen as just negative troublemakers always criticizing."

This veteran campaigner has managed 24 elections over the past 18 years and boasts 22 successes. He told delegates

Hodgson earns MNR critic posting

Victoria-Haliburton's new Conservative MPP has been named Critic for the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Chris Hodgson's understanding of the issues surrounding this ministry became evident during the by-election campaign, causing Conservative leader Mike Harris to take note.

"During his campaign, Chris demonstrated a tremendous grasp of resource issues so critical to his riding," Harris said. "He has earned the Natural Resources Critic post."

Hodgson welcomed the appointment. "It's encouraging to be given such an important role so soon after being elected. I'm looking forward to the challenge and hopefully offering some constructive advice."

The former Dysart Township Reeve has been a Member of Provincial Parliament since March 17 when he won the seat in a by-election.

"Decisions made at the MNR have repercussions on industry, recreation and tourism, the environment, municipal affairs and small business," said Hodgson. "One of my main objectives will be to ensure that decisions and processes are based on a common-sense approach which will provide results and take in the needs of rural Ontario.

Hodgson was also appointed to a Standing Committee on Regulations and Private Bills.

School board finalizes its budget

The Haliburton County Board of Education gave final approval to its 1994 budget with a surprising split vote.

The budget of $17,076,545 was passed, but it was also opposed by five of the 14 trustees in attendance at last Tuesday's board meeting.

Glamorgan Trustee Craig Petit was the only member to speak out against the budget. He was asking for a reversal in the cut to teaching staff at the Gooderham school.

The budget calls for a reduction of .7 teachers at Gooderham Elementary School, which Petit said is a big mistake. While enrolment is increasing, the teaching staff is decreasing, he noted. Meanwhile, the school has a high proportion of students needing special attention. Petit said Education Director Brad Saunders said this situation is not unique to Gooderham. Enrolment is increasing across the board and there will be three fewer teachers next year.

Saunders said the board is not in a position where it can hire new teachers because the provincial social contract calls for increased pupil-teacher ratios. Therefore, additional teaching staff at Gooderham would mean reduced staffing elsewhere.

"Every school in one shape or another will be offering less service," he said. "It's a very difficult situation for all of us."

The pupil/teacher ratio in Gooderham is 12, which is well below the board average of 15.

Petit then asked if the board would consider hiring an educational assistant to help out at Gooderham. "If there's no change, please give us an EA to help the kids," he said. "Otherwise, the kids will just go through the system and be of no value to anyone."

The Superintendant of Schools, said there is a procedure for applying for educational assistants. He said Gooderham school has not yet applied for an assistant. He said any request will be considered according to the procedure when it is received.

Trustee Len Salvatori said funding for more teachers might have been possible if the board agreed to cut the number of trustees.

Cutting trustees is no solution, countered Cheryl Murdoch. With fewer trustees to carry the workload, the board would ultimately be forced to hire additional administrative staff, she said.
